

United States Interagency Council on Homelessness

Preventing and Ending Homelessness in the United States

Matthew Doherty Regional Coordinator

Matthew Doherty serves as a Regional Coordinator at the United States Interagency Council on Homelessness (USICH), a principal representative and bridge between the work of the full Council and states and communities. In this role, he is responsible for facilitating the strategic implementation of Opening Doors specifically in California, Arizona, Nevada, and Hawaii.

Regional coordinators convene stakeholders at every level of government and with the private sector, encouraging implementation of strategies that maximize the impact of Federal resources and supporting strategic planning efforts. Regional Coordinators also disseminate information about proven practices, bridge linkages among communities, and share practical resources to support community efforts and foster momentum through shared knowledge and cross-community collaboration.

Matthew brings to his new role with USICH more than twenty years of experience in both the private and public sectors, focused on the creation of housing, services programs, and economic opportunities for disadvantaged communities and households. Matthew has most recently served as Principal of Housing Policy and Planning for LeSar Development Consultants (LDC), where he managed the implementation of the Ending Homelessness in Downtown San Diego Campaign, among many other projects.

Previously, Matthew served in a variety of roles for the Corporation for Supportive Housing (CSH) and is a nationally known expert regarding financing, policy, and operational issues for supportive housing and strategies for ending homelessness. Matthew most recently served as Director of CSH's Consulting Group, managing the provision of customized consulting, technical assistance and training services to public agencies and nonprofit organizations in communities across the United States, focusing on enhancing policies, planning, and systems for the financing, development and operation of an expanded supply of affordable and supportive housing. He previously directed CSH's National Resource Center.

Matthew also previously held management roles with the San Diego Housing Commission and the King County Housing Authority in Washington State and has extensive knowledge of Public Housing Authorities and HUD-funded housing and resident services programs. Matthew has a Bachelor of Arts degree from Oberlin College and a Master of Public Administration degree from the University of Washington.
